Company Profile

Tim Stead BVSc, MRCVS

Tim qualified from Bristol vet school two decades before the BBC did the series of vets in practice that made many of the students famous. He was there from 1978 until 1983. As a result you will not see him on the TV.

His only claim to fame came from repairing the bill of a swan that flew into a lamp post in Clifton. He was photographed by the local evening press wiring it back together which is rather like wiring two pieces of edam cheese together.

He has one rabbit, two guinea pigs, and twenty hens as pets. He is married and has one son and four step children. He is a local parish councillor and has been a governor of Skelton Primary school for over ten years. His hobbies include DIY, gardening, conservation and chain saw work.

He has been on courses for ultrasound, cytology (looking at cells under the microscope), lase surgery, anaesthesia, radiology, rabbit medicine, emergency medicine and many others.

Other Staff

We employ seven nurses some have been working at the surgery for over ten years. They all have pets and a wealth of experience in handling and looking after pets. Some specialise in behaviour problems, some in bull terriers and boxers and some have detailed knowledge of small furrries.
